ABOUT

Brooks Elizabeth Lawley, a Commercial Real Estate Agent in the Baton Rouge area, infuses a distinctive southern charm into all facets of her job. Upon joining the NAI Latter & Blum commercial division, she quickly became an active contributing member of the Baton Rouge community, dedicated to the development of a safe, exciting, and profitable environment. Through her experiences, Brooks has developed a keen eye for details and has seen firsthand what it means to go the extra mile. As a young agent, she facilitated a significant deal with a major national developer, showcasing her entrepreneurial spirit. In her approach to real estate, she acknowledges the significance of personalized service and genuinely connecting with her clients. Her hard work and dedication to her profession led her to win BRAC's 2019 Ambassador of the Year for the Baton Rouge Area Chamber. Brooks relishes the opportunity to collaborate with her colleagues and learn from industry experts such as Ty Gose, Chris Gremillion, and Ben Johnson. While staying up-to-date with market trends, Brooks engages in networking with fellow real estate professionals, notably through her local and national charitable involvements. A Houston, Texas native and graduate of the University of Southern California, Brooks approaches each new opportunity with a readiness to embark on new endeavors.
